4. RESEARCH INTERESTS

My main areas of methodological and practical research interest concern spatial statistics, in particular spatial point processes and spatio-temporal geostatistics, motivated by applications in the ecological and environmental sciences. In particular, most of the published applied papers analyse data coming from ecology or the environment (forest fires, forest species, wild animals, soil contamination, air pollution, etc). I have also worked in Monte Carlo inference, multivariate statistics and non-parametric smoothing.

5. TEACHING EXPERIENCE

I have developed and taught a wide range of courses in a university context, including undergraduate and postgraduate degree courses in probability and statistics, and statistics serving teaching aimed at particular client groups. In particular, I have developed and taught short courses for master and Ph.D. programmes in Spain (Department of Statistics, University of Navarra; Department of Statistics, University of Zaragoza; Addlink, Scientific Software, Barcelona, Madrid; Department of Mathematics and Statistics, Complutense University of Madrid; Merck & Sharp Dohme, Madrid; General Hospital of Castellon; Health Institute Carlos III, Madrid; Spanish Oceanographic Institute, Madrid; Lucent Technologies, Madrid; Harbour of Barcelona; International Postgraduate Course on Geographic Information Analysis).
